Modern Slavery – Slavery and Human Trafficking Statement

This statement is made pursuant to section 54(1) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and constitutes our slavery and human trafficking statement.

The James Hutton Institute is a well-respected and globally recognised research organisation delivering fundamental and applied science to drive the sustainable use of land and natural resources. We are an internationally networked organisation that operates from multiple sites in Scotland, including Aberdeen and Dundee. We employ more than 500 scientists and support staff, making us one of the largest research centres in the UK and the first of its type in Europe.

Our supply chain is made up of a large number of third party providers, many of which are small and medium sized enterprises where we procure a large and varied range of goods, works and services.

We have a zero tolerance to slavery and human trafficking and are committed to ensuring that there is no modern slavery or human trafficking in our supply chains or in any part of our business.

We are committed to reviewing our procurement policies and procedures to ensure that our supply chain is compliant with the provisions of the Modern Slavery Act 2015.
